Ms. Marlene H Dortch

FCC Commission's Secretary

Washington, D. C.,

Dear Ms. Dortch:

My understanding is that the FCC is considering dropping current broadcast decency standards that ban explicit profanity and "non-sexual" nudity on television. This is a disturbing development when we as a nation should be helping and protecting decency, certainly for our children, as well as adults. Why would we wish to approve of more indecency?

Many of us remember the early days of television without the gutter language. Caring parents were not embarrassed to have their children watch programs with them.

We respectfully urge the Commission not to approve measures to lower the standards on radio and television.

Sincerely,

Gary K Boyd

It is my understanding that the FCC is considering lowering its decency standards for Network television and radio. If adopted the new standards would allow brief nudity and isolated expletives even during prime time.

Please don't do it. There is enough such programming as it is. Why not have the decency to reserve network programming as the last hope for entertainment that 99% of the time is not offensive to most people? As it is, the occasional obscenity does slip in and I find that objectionable. Viewers should have a choice. Yes they can choose to turn it off. But it's tough enough to raise kids nowadays. We can monitor what they watch as long as they are in our homes. We cannot be there when they are at playmates homes. We think we know the other families' standards, but they may not be as vigilant as we'd like.

Again, let the FCC show a little class. Don't relax the existing standards just for the sake of the almighty dollar. You know that's the real reason for even considering this relaxation. The hope is to compete with the cable channels, the Internet etc. for a bigger share , higher ratings, a bigger piece of the action.

Don't do it. Don't lower your standards!

Sincerely,

David Schiappa

Dear FCC,

With this note, I am voicing my desire for moral values to be upheld. Please allow for less nudity and cursing on our airwaves.

Thank you for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Dear Commission Members,

I am writing in regard to the decency standards for television and radio. I respectfully request that we do not lower our standards anymore. There is enough of the vulgar, lewd, and disgusting already. Let us lift our standards and provide a light and positive direction for our country. Our youth are our future and they need more healthy and uplifting entertainment. Are we not deluged with enough problems in today's society? I think we could at least stop the downward slide we are on by setting some decency standards. You don't have to wallow in the garbage to know that it stinks.

Respectfully,

Becky Gerratt

To Whom it may Concern,

To anyone who considers decency wrong I guess they just cannot get enough of it. To people who enjoy being thoughtful of other people, nudity and profanity are almost always not an option. On public broadcasting, either radio or television, we have more than enough to put up with already. It seems to me anything additional would be putting us on a downward slide to the gutter. Please do not give us any relaxing of your ruling. Ask your self why this could possibly be a good option. Thank you.

RE: GN Docket No. 13-86

To Whom It May Concern:

Please DO NOT relax any obscenity standards. If anything, the standards need to be raised higher. There are far too many curse words being spoken on public TV today and nudity being exposed even during commercial advertisements. Young children are not maturely able to process this and need to be protected.

Thank you for this opportunity to express my desire. We all will be called to give an account before the God of creation some day.

Sincerely,
